The Ministry of Citizenship, Fundação Bienal and Itaú present the traveling exhibitions of the 33rd Bienal de São Paulo – Affective Affinities

The 33rd Bienal de São Paulo will travel to 8 cities in 2019

Promoted by the Fundação Bienal in partnership with various cultural institutions, the program brings selections of artworks featured at the Bienal de São Paulo to other cities in Brazil and abroad

Fundação Bienal begins, in March 2019, the program of traveling exhibitions of the 33rd Bienal de São Paulo – Affective Affinities, a show that received 736,000 visitors at the Bienal Pavilion in Ibirapuera Park, from September to December, 2018. With this initiative, seven cities in Brazil and one abroad are already confirmed to receive selections of artworks featured at the Bienal: Belo Horizonte (MG), Campinas (SP), Vitória (ES), Juiz de Fora (MG), São José do Rio Preto (SP), Brasília (DF), Porto Alegre (RS) and Medellín (Colombia).

For the realization of the program, Fundação Bienal de São Paulo established new partnerships with the Secretary of Culture, Sport and Leisure of the Government of Espírito Santo (ES), the Museu Nacional da República (DF), the Fundação Iberê Camargo (RS) and the Museo de Antioquia, in Medellín (Colombia). Additionally, institutional collaborations with Sesc SP, Fundação Clóvis Salgado (MG) and the Universidade Federal de Juiz de Fora (MG) were renewed.

“The Bienal de São Paulo is a cultural heritage of all Brazilians, and to increase access to its contents, Fundação Bienal co-promotes, with partner cultural institutions, the program of traveling exhibitions. Other than the shows, the initiative includes educational and diffusion actions, according to the Fundação’s mission of integrating culture and education to the daily life”, says José Olympio da Veiga Pereira, president of the Fundação Bienal.

The traveling exhibitions of the 33rd Bienal de São Paulo were conceived by guest curator Jacopo Crivelli Visconti as new experiences in relation to the original project developed by this edition’s chief curator, Gabriel Pérez-Barreiro. The show held in São Paulo consisted in a combination of elements: the general concept of the Bienal; the seven different exhibitions organized by seven artist-curators; the individual participations of artists invited directly by the chief curator; and the relations that were created among all these instances.

For the traveling exhibitions, the aim was to emphasize where artworks, artists and thoughts – which at the 33rd Bienal appeared separated and distant – approach and mutually attract one another, just like the molecules and elements cited by Goethe in his novel Elective Affinities (1809), one of the references of the project by Pérez-Barreiro. In this sense, the exhibitions that will circulate in 2019 do not literally replicate what was seen at the last Bienal, but rather present different associations and relationships based on cross-sections of artworks and artists.

Actions of Diffusion

The program of traveling exhibitions will promote activities for professors, educators and mediators who work with the public in the program's partner institutions. Based on the contents of the 33rd Bienal and its educational publication, Invitation to Attention, the activities propose exercises that invite people to be attentive to the experience of art, in everything from the first contact with the work to the sharing of reflections about it.

About the Program of Traveling Exhibitions

The program of traveling exhibitions with selections of artworks featured at the Bienal de São Paulo is an initiative that is entering its fifth edition in 2019. The traveling exhibitions of the 32nd Bienal, in 2017, went to thirteen cities, two of which were abroad, and received a total of 650,000 visitors. For the traveling exhibitions of the 33rd Bienal, the Fundação Bienal de São Paulo established new partnerships with the Secretaria de Estado da Cultura do Governo do Estado do Espírito Santo (ES), the Museu Nacional da República (DF), the Fundação Iberê Camargo (RS) and the Museo de Antioquia, in Medellín (Colombia). Additionally, institutional collaborations with Sesc SP, Fundação Clóvis Salgado (MG) and the Universidade Federal de Juiz de Fora (MG) were renewed.
